

IOG Scotsturf Exhibition On Course To Be Bigger And Better Than Ever

After securing an order worth over £100,000 as a result of exhibiting at last year's IOG Scotsturf exhibition, Cleveland Sitesafe, the specialist manufacturer of highly secure all-steel storage and accommodation units, didn't hesitate in booking a stand at this year's show in Edinburgh on 8-9 November 2006.

In addition to obtaining a number of high-profile enquiries over the busy two-day show, general manager John Hodgson says the highlight of IOG Scotsturf was the six-figure order to supply a series of Toolsafe storage units for an allotment project in Clydebank.

"Aside from that order and a hatful of enquiries, we were also very impressed with the show overall, which was professionally staged and featured a high level of valued-added content that encouraged busy visitors to spend time away from their daily routines. We are certainly looking forward to this year's event."

Cleveland Sitesafe will be joined at the Royal Highland Hall by an extensive list of exhibitors – over 100 of Scotland's premier suppliers all displaying vehicles, machines, tools, products, services and techniques to enable open space professionals to be more effective in their day-to-day roles.

As well as a number of first-time-on-view products, IOG Scotsturf will also feature informative seminars and discussions covering all the 'hot button' topics, as well as a series of live demonstrations.

The New Product & Innovation Awards will again be staged, while the ever-popular Scottish Football Groundsman of the Year Awards are certain to be crowd-pullers. The groundsman awards are open to all groundsmen within the Scottish Premier and Football League Divisions 1, 2 and 3, and has the full support of the Scottish Football Association.

It all adds up to an event that will be bigger and better than every before, and unmissable as 'Scotland's own' open space management show.
