

Regional Structure

The IOG is divided into eight regions across the UK and Ireland, with each region having its own network of branches. The IOG network offers members local support through a programme of meetings and events where you can meet and exchange ideas with like minded colleagues

Each branch and region has a committee who are responsible for organising local activity. They are also a contact point between members at a local level and the national board and executive staff.

In addition to our local committees we also have regional staff in Scotland, Wales and the north of England to assist with regional development and to provide support services. In 2010 our network of professional regional staff will expand to cover the whole of the UK. Their responsibility is to support their local committees, volunteers and members as well as developing training and education opportunities in their area.

We welcome anyone who would like to take on a more active role with the IOG, on a volunteer basis, for the benefit of the region and the wider industry. The benefits of getting involved are endless and we have a host of roles available to suit your skill set - for more details visit the Volunteering section by selecting from the menu on the left.

Your local committee would be delighted to welcome you at a future meeting or event - if you're not already a member come along anyway and see what it's all about.
